To Whom It May Concern,

In 2008, Schnader Harrison Segal & Lewis, LLP sought out a company who could provide us independent guidance on reducing our telecommunications costs. We reviewed several companies, and chose Schooley Mitchell.

Important factors in our decision included the need for the vendor to be telecom-vendor neutral, and positive recommendations from other law firms. We were looking for someone who would provide us a number of creative options for cost savings.

Schooley Mitchell's approach was comprehensive and fair. They not only found significant savings through simple auditing of our phone bills, they also vetted other potential telecomm vendors that we could opt to use going forward. They provided service options from several vendors from whom to choose. They evaluated our existing contracts to ensure that we would not violate terms or incur penalties.

In our case, we did replace some vendors with others. Schooley Mitchell facilitated everything from service cutover through troubleshooting.

Based on Schooley Mitchell's comprehensive service review and recommendations, Schnader Harrison Segal & Lewis has experienced significant telecommunication savings averaging around 30% across our Local & Long Distance voice services as well as our MPLS and Disaster Recovery data services. Schooley Mitchell provides a detailed report on our cost savings each month, followed up with a conference call during which we review the statement and make changes as necessary.

Based on their industry knowledge and expertise, I would highly recommend the services of Ted Kern & Robert Hill of Schooley Mitchell for any business that is looking to outsource the time consuming and tedious process of telecom expense management to fully optimize your telecommunication cost structure.
