To Whom it May Concern:

I would love to recommend Tom Dondero and his company, Schooley Mitchell of Spring Lake. Tom told me about his model of cost savings with no consulting fees, and a guarantee at that.

Tom and his analysts looked at our merchant services rates and activity and went to bat for us to find a better deal, and as he explained, that usually comes with no change in vendor.

After gathering our information and creating a baseline cost report, they spoke with a bunch of different vendors and used their market knowledge and clout to find us a better deal.

In what I am told is a relatively rare case, Schooley Mitchell was not able to find us significant savings with other vendors nor our current partner, confirming that we had done a great job in securing our current deal.

We never paid a dime and for the next three years Tom and his team will be monitoring our invoices for any billing errors as well as keeping on top of the market to see if there are any better options for us as we live out our engagement.

While we would have loved to have saved on our processing fees, Tom was true to his word that this was a risk-free service with only upside. I highly recommend speaking with Tom.

Sincerely,

Jaycee Cosentino
