To whom it may concern:

At San Jose Holistic Health, we take a whole-person approach to care, looking for the underlying causes of a problem rather than only treating symptoms. Our practice offers chiropractic care for adults, pregnant women and children, treatment for auto accident and work injuries, and wellness services such as nutritional counseling and corporate wellness seminars for local companies. Running a practice like ours means every dollar of overhead matters, so I wanted to be sure we weren't overpaying for the basics.

I engaged Aneetha Vijay of Schooley Mitchell to review our card processing costs. The process was simple and seamless. After a brief conversation and sharing our invoices, her team handled everything. She reduced our card processing fees by over 50% and helped connect our payments with our CRM, which saves my office staff hours of manual work every month.

What I valued most was getting real savings with no risk to us, since she is paid only when she delivers results. If you run a practice and have ever wondered whether you're overpaying, a conversation with Aneetha is time well spent.

Sincerely,
